

WASHING OUT GOLD

CHARLES WILSON OF BUTTE COUNTY DESCRIBES THE PLACER METHODS

Charles Wilson of Big Bar, Butte County, California, father of Mrs. W. R. Phelon of 428 S. Maryland, who is an old, experienced placer miner, has been interested in examining the Little Gem Portable Placer Machine, manufactured by the Monarch Placer Machine company, of Brand boulevard, Glendale. Mr. Wilson had his attention directed to these machines and he was much struck by their qualities and possibilities.

"If I had had such a machine as that in the early days," said Mr. Wilson, "I would be a millionaire by this time. In 1874, when I went into Butte county to do placer mining on the North Fork of the Feather river there was no means of saving one-half of the fine gold. That was washed away into the Feather river. You can see from these old photographs how we washed out the gold in those days. The miners used the 'Long Tom,' a primitive washing machine, which nevertheless made many a fortune. The gravel in the old days was rich. There is rich gravel yet but it lies in out-of-the-way places and is difficult to get at.

"What we needed in the early days was a machine like this new device, the 'Little Gem,' which gives promise of saving every color of gold. There is not a richer region for gold than the Feather river. It is called aptly the 'Golden Feather.' The bed of that river is literally paved with gold. If one could turn aside the river and lay bare its channel for five miles more gold would be found there than would pay off the united war debts of the European nations.

"The country, in the early days, was inaccessible to most. We used to work four days in the week by taking in the Sunday. The other three days were spent in packing provisions and other necessities from the nearest store. It took us a whole day to reach the store; another day to make purchases and rest up and a third day to return. That was enough to daunt many a would-be miner. But we old-timers stuck to it and we made pretty good money out of the old country.

"Now the Western Pacific runs alongside the Feather river and it is possible to get provisions and camp outfit at a distance of about six miles. There is a general store where provisions are not much dearer than in Glendale.

"In the early days we used to take $5 to the wheelbarrow. That was in places where we had wing-dammed the river. Men working on the placers made easily $100 a day. Washing out with the 'Long Tom' was a common practice then. Occasionally you see one of them yet. There were probably 5000 men working on the North Fork of the Feather river in 1874.

"Just before I went into the Big Bar country there was trouble on the Feather river with Indians and 461 of them were rounded up by the California cavalry militia and taken to the Indian reservation, at Round valley, in Mendocino county. Out of that number 277 arrived; 150 were left on the way, unable to travel; 32 died and two escaped.

"Back of the North Fork there is a very rich gold country; but it is wild and inaccessible. In the winter it is piled deep in snow. The whole country is buried, but up the mountains there is an area 100 square miles in extent that is positively rich in gold. If anyone had the perseverance and a small amount of capital that person could by staying in the country during the winter get a good start the next summer and would certainly make money.

"Meantime I and a few other old-timers are content to wash a living out of the old Feather river channel. It is not a fortune but it is a living. To do the same one would need to own claims there and would also need to be prepared to rough it and take the bad luck with the good."

BOY SCOUTS TO CAMP

Troop No. 1 of the Glendale Boy Scouts is about to leave for a 6-day camping vacation, at Brookside Camp, Pasadena. The boys will start Wednesday, Aug. 16. The boys are short of tents and other camp equipment and would appreciate any help from the public. Those wishing to help by giving any of the necessary articles may communicate with Scoutmaster Guthrie, at his home, 523 W. Ninth street, phone Glendale 139-J, or call on Derrick Paine, 109 S. Maryland, Glendale 340.

COUNTRY IS BOOMING

RICHARD HARDY FROM TENNESSEE SAYS HE HAS FOUND PROSPERITY EVERYWHERE

"It would be difficult to convey an idea of the intense activity that pervades business everywhere throughout the East and Middle West of the United States," said Richard Hardy of Chattanooga, Tenn., brother-in-law of Stephen C. Packer, Glendale's candidate for county supervisor. Mr. Hardy is president of the Dixie Portland Cement company. "I have traveled recently throughout a number of States," he continued, "and everywhere I found the hum of busy life, with money circulating as it has not been doing for years.

"Possibly this prosperity has not yet reached the Pacific coast for the reason that there are not many great manufacturing centers here; but it must reach here in time even indirectly. The purchasing power of the East must have its effect on the natural producing power of western agriculture and in a hundred ways the prosperity of the land must ultimately reach this coast.

"Looking at the busy streets of Los Angeles there is every appearance of wealth and prosperity. It is twelve years since I saw Los Angeles and I would hardly recognize it for the same city. The growth has been marvelous. It is not only that the buildings are now modern but that the population has increased to such an extent. In time Los Angeles is bound to become the great metropolis of the Pacific coast."

Mr. Hardy was one of the originators of the idea of constructing the great Dixie highway which runs from Chicago to New Orleans and traverses a great section of the South to its immense benefit. He says that he finds good roads everywhere and that California has been to a large extent the State that has stimulated others to construct good highways. "There are few States," said Mr. Hardy, "that have as fine a road system as California. The California roads are excellent. People who have come here as visitors and having enjoyed the comfort and pleasure of driving on these fine roads are not content to use inferior roads. Thus the old mud roads of the South and Middle West are gradually giving way to systems of fine macadamized and asphalted highways which will be great arteries of business and pleasure.

"I have been through part of the South on my present trip, and wherever I went I found signs of prosperity. Conditions in the southern States were never better. Cotton is bringing a good price and there is a ready market in the Eastern States for all the produce of the South. Alabama and Mississippi I found active and prosperous; but everywhere there is a lack of men for labor and a need for more railroad equipment.

"Two weeks ago I was in New York. There I found everything running at full capacity. This is partly caused by war orders, but I think it only fair to say that apart from the war orders there is genuine business activity. It is reasonable to believe that the stimulus given by the war orders in the first place was the cause of this extension of activity to other avenues of manufacture and business.

"I had business that took me to El Paso. There I found in place of the straggling adobe frontier town of ten years ago a fine, modern, skyscraper city of 75,000 inhabitants. El Paso has every modern adjunct and the New York militia, who came expecting to find the 'wild and woolly west' were amazed to find the culture and the luxuries of an advanced city. There are 80,000 militiamen in or about El Paso. They throng its streets. They fill its cafes, they patronize its stores. Most of them have money and they are spending it freely. They have given El Paso a wonderful stimulus.

"I leave Glendale on Monday and am sorry I have to go so soon. I think this is a delightful spot, admirably situated, with a fine climate and close enough to the big city to supply those metropolitan features which so many people count of value."

BLINDFOLDED BY OWN HAT

Ralph Dodsworth thinks "A. M. L." who in yesterday evening's News says not a hat was removed when the Star Spangled Banner was played by the Glendale Band at the concert on the 21st of July must have been blindfolded by his own hat for he says, "As a matter of fact about ten of us boys who were standing in a group removed our hats at the time mentioned, but we did not hold them in front of our eyes."

Wave after wave of Teutons rolled against the defenders of the shell-shattered ruins but the French were not to be moved and the Germans retired after suffering severe loss.

MISSION CANDLE DAY

NON-SECTARIAN CELEBRATION WILL BE HELD SUNDAY, AUGUST 6

Great preparations are being made for the "Candle Day" celebration at the San Fernando Mission, Sunday, Aug. 6, which is the 147th anniversary of the day that Gov. Portola and Father Crespi camped at San Fernando with their expedition—the first white men to see this valley.

Persons interested in the movement were busy at the Mission all day Friday with the details of the work—the women marking the many candles which have been sold, the men seeing about racks to hold the candles, the barbecue pit, seats, etc.,

For the convenience of the Catholics who will attend, it is expected that mass will be celebrated at 11 o'clock. At 12 the Landmark's club will take charge of the very interesting program which has been prepared, consisting of speeches by Charles Lummis, president of the club; John S. McGroarty, Bishop Johnston of the Episcopal church and others. Miss Ellen Beach Yaw will sing. At 1 o'clock all in attendance are invited to partake of the free barbecue. Bands of strolling singers will entertain the crowds throughout the afternoon.

There are 19 arches in the cloister of the old monastery, and about 3:30 p. m. eighteen women from different parts of the valley will assist Miss Lucretia del Valle in lighting the thousands of candles which will be burned at that time in these cloister halls. Each candle will be marked with the name of the donor. There will also be an appropriate song service.

This celebration is neither Catholic nor Protestant but non-sectarian, the chief idea being to preserve the Mission for the enjoyment of all. As it is the only mission in this locality, it seems very fitting that the public as a whole should unite in saving it for the San Fernando valley.

More than $3,000 have already been contributed, with a number of organizations yet to hear from. Forty dollars has been given in Glendale and further contributions will be gladly received.

SINGLE TAX MEETING

Quite a large crowd assembled in the Glendale Union High School auditorium, Friday evening at 8 o'clock, to listen to addresses by noted speakers of the Single Tax League. The gathering was under the auspices of the Glendale branch of the Single Tax League. Dr. Jessie Russell presided. Mr. Luke North, editor of "Everyman," who is running a series of interesting articles entitled "The Great Adventure," in his paper, for the purpose of bringing the subject of the Single Tax before the American public, gave a most interesting address.

Henry George's daughter, Mrs. de Mille of Hollywood, gave a graphic and absorbing account of Henry George's early life and struggles. Dr. I. H. Durfee of Glendale gave a clever, scholarly and lucid exposition of the Single Tax principle and the beneficial results that might be expected from its adoption. Mr. J. W. Durham of W. Seventh street, Glendale, also spoke in an interesting manner.

At the close of the evening Mrs. Nanno Woods in a characteristically witty speech presented to Mrs. Danford, librarian of Glendale library, for the use of that institution, a set of Henry George's works, on behalf of the society. Mrs. Danford made a suitable reply.

A temporary organization was formed to last for the balance of the campaign. Dr. I. H. Durfee was elected president and Dr. Clarence A. Webb, secretary.

GUEST HONORED

Miss Edith Ewins of 747 Verdugo road entertained at an afternoon party in honor of Miss Dorothy Gilson, who will soon return to Berkeley, going Thursday afternoon. The table decorations were of pink oleander and the afternoon was pleasantly spent at 500 and music.

LOCAL BIRD LORE

DOROTHY SHERMAN WRITES ABOUT FEATHERED FRIENDS

Do you notice the birds around your home? It is really wonderful the number you can see when your eyes are open for them. And it's so interesting to watch them and learn about them.

Everyone knows the linnet or house finch, that little gray brown bird with such a stout, strong beak, for cracking seeds. Unhappily he does not confine himself to seeds alone but uses that stout little beak to peck at the fruit and so gains many enemies. But people who study birds have proven that they do more good than harm; they have found that they eat more than enough noxious weed seeds and insects to pay for the fruit they spoil. So surely it is foolish as well as cruel to kill and persecute them. We usually see them in flocks, twittering among themselves and singing their sweet songs. The males have red on crown and breast and as two and three broods are raised in a season there are young of every age in a flock.

The Brewer blackbird is one of our commonest birds. They flock on our lawns and bathe in the water from the hose. The shiny black males with their bright yellow eyes are handsome fellows indeed and their brownish mates with the black eyes, though not so handsome, are trusting, friendly birds. The young look just like their mother and have black eyes like hers. It is a pretty sight to see them begging for food. They try to get their parents to feed them when they are almost full grown. They will crouch down in front of the parent bird and flutter their wings, crying piteously all the while.

Have you noticed the way a bird looks at you? He can't look straight ahead because his eyes are too far apart so he cocks his head first to one side and then to the other. The blackbirds have the sauciest way of cocking their heads and watching you out of their bright yellow eyes. Just now is moulting time and you will notice that most of them present a very bedraggled appearance while some are completely minus their tails.

Everyone knows the towhee or brown bird. It is the large plump brown bird who hops about on the ground with a quiet, contented little chirp now and then; and the mocker, that mad songster who is to us what the robin is to the easterners! Have you noticed that he is not singing now as much as he used to? That is because the eggs in the carefully guarded nest have hatched and he is too busy filling the open red mouths for any more midnight serenades (for which we are very thankful).

Do you see the humming birds hovering about the flowers? We see them opening the tightly closed geranium buds when the blossoms are robbed of their sweets. They seem more like large bumble bees than birds and if you sit very still on the porch near the flowers they will

GIRLS' SEWING CIRCLE

The Girls' Sewing Circle of Pacific Avenue school had a large attendance Thursday in spite of the warm weather. Eleven girls, Agnes Thaxter, Garnet Peters, Fern Peters, Naomi Platt, Jean Livingston, Irene Morgan, Lillian Mason, Florence Hollingsworth, Helen Dimmick, Marjorie Sherman and Dorothy Sherman were present. They met in a cool room in the school and as this was a meeting especially for crocheting, nearly everyone had that work and those that wished to learn how to crochet were taught. Fern Peters gave two piano selections, Garnet Peters recited two very interesting poems, and Marjorie Sherman gave a piano selection.

"The Secret Garden" was read while the girls worked and then after games in the court the club adjourned. An interesting program is planned for next time. A quiet hour of sewing in a cool place is just the thing for a hot day. Bring any kind of sewing. Remember, every Thursday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. Girls of any age are welcome.

WEEK-END PARTY

A party of young people left this afternoon for Topanga Canyon, where they will spend the week end. It is the intention of the party to camp on the beach at the mouth of canyon. Those enjoying this trip were Mr. and Mrs. Louise Nunn, the Misses Fern Cook, Helen Mosher, Leta McCoy, Lora Maxwell and Dorothy Gilson; Messrs. Wm. Bode, Morris Caruthers, Ralph Lusby, James McBryde and Harry Francy.

INTEREST IN THE YOSEMITE

How much interest is being developed in the Yosemite valley by the admission of autos to that magnificent park can be seen in the almost daily accounts given by people of their trips to the region of waterfalls, rushing rivers and magnificent mountains. The interest in the valley is stimulated to a great extent by the interesting geological talks that Mr. Curry's camp gives every now and then on the veranda of his hotel, just below the Yosemite falls.

People who have made the trip to that region of magnificent erosions where Nature has obligingly sliced down the rocks so that the geological formation can be seen, come back full of a desire to learn more of the geology of the country. All are anxious to find out how the valley was made and how its adjacent canyons were carved out of the rock. Much information is lacking on this point even now and the United States government has sent out an expedition to study the geological conditions and report.

This expedition is expected to reach Hetch-Hetchy this week and by and by a United States Geological Survey report will be issued that will be of vast interest. A comparative study of the rock formations of the Yosemite will be made by F. E. Matthes and F. C. Calkins of the United States Geological Survey, and geological problems that have long been the subject of dispute will be explained in a volume to be published by the government.

There seems little doubt that the Yosemite valley was inhabited by a primitive race of people during the interval that elapsed between the first and second glacial epochs, and Prof. Matthes hopes some day to find relics of this vanished race. During the interglacial period the climate of the Yosemite valley was warmer and the vegetation more luxuriant than at present.

It seems likely that the valley was formed by a combination of earthquake action, erosion and glaciation. When three separate upheavals lifted the Sierras to their present height the Merced river became a mountain torrent and in the course of centuries eroded its channel to a depth of 1800 feet below Glacier point.

Two glacial epochs followed with a period of mild climate intervening. The glaciers left the valley a glacial lake, which was gradually filled to the present level of the valley floor by sediment brought down by the Merced river and Tenaya creek. Glacial specimens gathered at Camp Curry form a most interesting collection illustrating the Yosemite Ice age.

Those who are interested in many other things than the mere condition of the roads into the valley or catching the limit of trout, or the number of miles their autos have run in a day, have profited largely by the wide and comprehensive views given them of the story of the great valley. Looking up at the Half-Dome, or Yosemite Falls or Glacier point and at the canyons that have been eroded between the heights it is possible to measure the great age of the valley and to appreciate the pride with which the geologists are looking forward to finding some trace of primitive man in the ancient deposits of the region. Such discoveries aid mankind in understanding something of the nature and story of the world in which we live and add to the reverence and love that humanity ought to have for the Supreme power of whom the Poet King sang, "Lord Thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations, before the mountains were brought forth or ever Thou hadst formed the earth or the world, from everlasting to everlasting Thou art God."

DANISH WEST INDIES PURCHASE

It is quite likely that in future years American people will look back with amazement at the fatuity of those legislators of the nation who are now strenuously opposing the purchase of the Danish West Indies by the United States. When Seward made his famous purchase of Alaska, which he got on the bargain counter for $7,000,000, the whole country sneered and jeered and talked of "Seward's Ice Chest." A few years afterward they were digging out as much gold in a month in Alaska as the whole cost of the purchase.

It is likely to be the same with the Danish West Indies. The islands are nothing to boast of in the matter of extent or of products, but they are valuable from their strategic position in connection with the Panama canal. It would be impossible to exaggerate the importance of the islands from this point of view. The danger is that if the United States refuses to buy the islands she cannot much longer prevent Denmark from selling them to a European bidder. Denmark has the right to sell her own property and will likely be backed up in that right by outside powers.

This is a case where the Monroe doctrine must be upheld or another blow will have been given to its prestige which is very shaky just at present. The same people who opposed the purchase of the Panama Canal zone are at work now objecting to the purchase of the Danish West Indies. They have brought their opposition to such a point that they have influenced many of the members of the Senate and of the House of Representatives to vote against the purchase.

It was reported in the telegraphic news of the Glendale Evening News Friday that Secretary Lansing and the Holland minister had signed the agreement for the purchase, in New York city, on that day. That leaves the matter entirely in the hands of the Senate and Representatives of the United States. It also puts the matter up to the Danish parliament. Should these two bodies ratify the purchase the United States will have a fortress in the West Indies that will do much to consolidate the position of the Panama canal.

That the Panama canal would be attacked in time of war cannot be doubted when one sees the desperate attempts of the Turks and Germans to get at the Suez canal, despite its assumed neutrality. The Canal has been written of and spoken about for years past as the gateway through which the riches of the West will yet be poured into the lap of the East; but there would not be much pouring of the riches into any lap save that of the conqueror were the Canal to be captured some day.

WHITE RIBBON PICNIC

GLENDALE W. C. T. U. ENJOYS
OUTING AT ELEANORE
RANCH

Temperance workers and their friends gathered in large numbers, Friday, at the picturesque Eleanore ranch, kindly thrown open for the annual picnic of the Glendale W. C. T. U. by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Brown. The ranch, which is just beyond the city limits, between Sycamore Canyon road and Sierra avenue, is an ideal spot for a picnic, with its shade trees and its position of easy access from Glendale. Luncheon was served at noon, under the large live-oak tree that is a feature of the ranch. The Rev. A. B. Smart offered prayer. At 2 p. m. a program was given.

Mrs. Gaylord, State Superintendent of Open Air meetings, gave a brief and enthusiastic talk on the benefit of fresh air. Mrs. H. V. Harrel gave a clever synopsis of the work of the recent National Prohibition convention. Mrs. E. D. Potter, an Englishwoman, gave an interesting biographical sketch of Lady Henry Somerset, the famous English and international temperance worker. She told how Lady Henry Somerset became convinced of the evils of liquor by working among the slums of London and how finally she became the successor of Frances Willard in the international work. Lady Henry Somerset began the Fresh Air movement, which is so prominent a part of W. C. T. U. work at the present day.

Patricia St. Clair, a little child of six years, delighted the audience by a clever interpretation of a little girl's troubles in a reading entitled, "My Folks." She also gave other numbers as an encore.

Mrs. Laura Martin of Los Angeles gave an excellent address on "Temperance and Labor," in which she showed the benefits that inevitably accrue to the workers who have renounced the use of liquor.

Mrs. John A. St. Clair gave a number of interesting readings with much dramatic power and subtlety of interpretation and an original composition exhibiting thorough mastery of the power of mimicry.

Mrs. P. S. McNutt, district parliamentarian of women's clubs, was one of the guests. The out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Julia Beers of Burbank, Mrs. Katie Evans of Los Angeles, Mrs. A. F. Krake, a popular clubwoman of the Shakespeare club of Pasadena; Mrs. Charles Jackson, Mrs. R. L. Gibbon and Mrs. F. M. Drake of Pasadena.

After a most enjoyable day the party broke up about 5 p. m. with many expressions of appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Brown for their hospitality.

"A NOTE OF JOY"

Discord never produces music. Some of us need to take this to heart as a practical rather than a poetic truth. Our days are harsh and jarring. Weeks go by without a single touch of harmonious beauty. And yet, somehow, out of all this discord we expect to make "Life, death, and the vast forever,

One grand, sweet song."

Some one has given us the key to the problem in the sentence, "Every day should be a note of joy." If we are sullen today and sad tomorrow, and the day after fret and repine because things are not just as we wish them to be, no master-musician can transform our harsh complaints into sweet melody. Music does not spring from discord.

But suppose instead that every day is a note of joy. Not a completed symphony, notice, not even a full, ringing chord, but just one joyful note sounding from a grateful heart. How surely our commonplace lives would become part of that "grand, sweet song" which is to fill heaven with harmony, and echo through the long eternity!

GOLF DEFINED

On the terrace of a country club a group of non-golfers were taking tea.

A male non-golfer said thoughtfully: "Golf might be defined as billiards gone to grass."

"Spleen on the green, I'd call it," said a female non-golfer.

"Or the last flicker in the dying fire of athletics," sneered a young football player.

"The misuse of land and language," suggested a tennis champion.

"No, no; you're all wrong," said a famous angler. "Golf is simply a game wherein the ball lies badly and the player well."—Washington Post.

garded in connection with the United States it is found that after the authorities of both governments had agreed to the purchase in 1867 the United States senate refused to ratify the bargain. The United States had not branched out in connection with the Philippines then. She had no protectorate over Cuba, no ownership of Porto Rico and no protectorate over Hayti or San Domingo.

At the same time it must be remembered that the present United States legislature very nearly voted to abandon the Philippine islands and that it is more than likely that much of that "Little America" sentiment will be brought to bear against the purchase. It is possible that Germany might be interested, as she was before, were her hands not tied by the war and her funds not available for such a purpose. The islands are well worth the $25,000,000 from a strategic and international point of view.

W. M. Platt, the tire man, at 437 Brand Boulevard has just added a complete stock of auto accessories to his large line of Savage tires and motor oils, as well as a new gas pump and a free air service. Mr. Platt says that his business for July just past was double what it was in July, 1915. He says that a considerable part of this increase is doubtless due to the fact that he keeps his tire stocks fresh and the largest assortment of sizes in the city.

come within arm's length of you.
If you see one perched on the clothes line squeaking for all he is worth you will know it is the Anna hummer, for that is the only variety that sings. The Ruby-throated is an Eastern variety and does not come here.

The hummers like to bathe in the spray when you water the lawn and then they fly to some favorite perch with each tiny feather standing on end, and looking like a round ball, and preen and fuss until they are sleek and beautiful once more.

Quite a contrast to this dainty bird is the shrike or butcher bird.
He looks very much like the mocker from a distance but he is fatter and has a broad black stripe running through his eye. He is not constantly and forever flitting his tail up and down either, while his harsh cry, something like the bluejay's, is very different from the mocker's lovely melodies. It is true that he does rob other birds nests sometimes but only in great hunger and he more than makes up for it with the mice and large insects he eats.

Mother Nature is wiser than we and she sees that every creature pays for its living in some way and we must not disturb the balance of Nature by killing of birds.

Another bird quite common about here is the Black Phoebe, sometimes called the pewee. He is a plump little fellow with a slight crest and entirely black except for a white belly. It catches its food in the manner of all flycatchers, sitting motionless until it spies some insect, then darting after it like a flash and back to the same perch again.

The other morning I saw a pair of beautiful Arizona Hooded Orioles just outside the window. The male was a beauty in orange and black while his mate was as different as could be in a suit of dull olive green.
This is the commonest oriole in California. There is a regular colony of them in the palm trees just outside La Ramada park at the extreme end of North Louise street. They build beautiful hanging nests of palm fibre and nearly always in palm trees. They have a queer chattering note not unlike the blackbirds. Indeed they belong to the same family.

On the last meeting of the Bird and Flower club to Verdugo park we saw myriads of little goldfinches feasting on the weed seeds just outside the park. They were the Lawrence goldfinch and were a grayish brown above and pale yellow below with a black cap and black on throat.
We saw a great many in a big clump of bamboo, twittering to themselves so sweetly. I came up so close to one little fellow that I could have reached where he was perched.
He was the daintiest, tiniest little thing with beady black eyes and the prettiest, sleekest plumage. The Lawrence goldfinch loves the foothills and such places rather than about our homes.

Verdugo park seems to be a particular haunt of the black-headed grosbeak, that handsome fellow in his suit of cinnamon or orange and black. He can be distinguished by his very thick bill, too. In this park you will also see tiny little gray birds so like the color of the ground that you can only see them when they move. These are the bush tits and they build a wonderful nest ten of twelve inches long though they themselves are the smallest bird next to the hummer that there is.

The other day I saw a pair of mourning doves light in a big pepper tree in our yard, and sit close together preening their feathers and cooling in the mournful way that gives them their name. They are a soft gray and they are such pretty, gentle creatures that you can't help love them.

A most interesting bird that is not so common around here is the phainopepla. It is a slender black bird, with a high crest or top-knot and striking white wing-bars. They feed on the pepper berries. They are cousins to the Cedar Waxwing.

The other day we noticed a great hubbub in the street and saw a pair of mockers, a towhee and five linnets all flying about and chattering over one poor little baby bird that couldn't fly yet. It sat perfectly still in the middle of the road and we couldn't for the life of us tell who it belonged to. A car was telling so we ran out and picked it up.
It was the dearest little thing! So soft and downy. We finally decided it belonged to the mockers and put it across the street in the parking. But the mockers had lost interest; they just interfered out of natural pugnacity. I guess, while the towhee had disappeared.
But the five linnets swooped down to it before we were three yards away and began coaxing it toward a pile of brush. One would go up and feed it something, and finally it fluttered and hopped to safety under the brush.

We often find baby mockers that have fallen out of the nest. They are full of life like their parents and try to fly before their scraggly wings and scrubby tails are ready. If you find a baby bird don't try to keep it and bring it up. It will most likely die and it is better to put it in some bushes or under the nest tree so that the parent birds can feed it.

Collections of birds' eggs are nice but what if every one began to collect them? I think a much nicer thing to collect is deserted last year's nests.

We found a mocker's nest quite

AUSTRALIA'S LIBERAL PLAN

In Australia the settler pays 4½ per cent interest and 1½ per cent on the principal, making the total payment 6 per cent, and is given 36½ years' time in which to repay loans. What the result is in a country similar in conditions to the United States has been described by a commission from British Columbia, which recommended the adoption of a similar system as a part of their irrigation policy, as follows:
"The system has not only increased the output of farms, given a great impulse to the agricultural industry, but has reacted on other industries and stimulated trade."

When after much arduous labor and the overcoming of great opposition, Market Director Weinstock had succeeded in organizing the California dried peach producers, he was met by a back-country peach grower who hadn't heard the good news and who had been wanting to apply a theory of his own.

"There's just one remedy for our marketing conditions," declared the man oratorically, "and that is to limit the production. Let's do it at once."

"Your suggestion," replied Colonel Weinstock blandly with his usual good-natured smile, "reminds me of the Irish lady who rushed to the bedside of her sick husband who was sleeping peacefully, shook him roughly by the shoulder and cried out at the top of her voice, 'Wake up, Pat! Wake up! It's time to be takin' yer insomnia medicine!'"

A most interesting way to learn about the birds is to make a bird read up about them and in your own words write a little essay about each one. It's lots of fun. You don't know how interesting birds are till you begin to study them.

UNCLE JOE'S REBUKE

Uncle Joe Cannon has a way of speaking his mind that is sometimes embarrassing to others. On one occasion an inexperienced young fellow was called upon to make a speech at a banquet at which former Speaker Cannon was present.
"Gentlemen," began the young fellow, "my opinion is that the gen-posed to take advantage of the generality of—"

"Sit down, son," interrupted Uncle Joe. "You're coming out of the same hole you went in at!"

Sunday Services at the Churches*CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The annual convention of the Christian Churches of Southern California, at Long Beach, came to a close with Sunday evening's service. Several members of the local church attended during the entire ten days and enjoyed it to the fullest. Rev. Kersheur, editor of the Christian Standard, one of the leading papers of the Disciples, was the chief speaker of the convention, and seems to have lived up to his reputation, judging by the reports so far received from all who heard him.

Of course a convention of this character, and the natural summer delights of Long Beach, attracted quite a large number of preachers and members from other parts of the State and country. Among the latter is Rev. W. D. Oram, of Dayton, Ohio, who is one of the able preachers of the Brotherhood. Mr. Oram has not been idle during his vacation but has occupied the pulpit of the First Christian church in Los Angeles on two Lord's days. All who have heard him think him a splendid preacher and as he has agreed to preach in the Glendale church tomorrow morning the members of the local church and their friends are expected to greet him with a large audience.

At the evening hour another treat is in store, as Rev. J. W. Carpenter, for the past several years a beloved preacher in Southern California, but who is now called to a professorship in Drake University, will deliver address. These services should make a very unusual mid-summer Sunday, and, no doubt, will be greatly enjoyed.

Rev. E. E. Francis, whose resignation as local pastor takes effect on September 1, will be present, but as he has been granted a vacation for the last half of the month, Sunday the 14th will probably be the last on which he will officiate. He has served for three years faithfully and efficiently and no man could leave a charge with more unanimity of good-will and sincere wishes for continued blessing than will he. At the present writing he has not decided on his next location.

RURAL CREDITS BILL PASSED

The passing of the Rural Credits Bill by Congress seems to afford general satisfaction, particularly to the farmer, who sees the cost of money for operating purposes becoming cheaper. Commenting editorially the Evening Herald very sensibly remarks:

If farm land is not good security for money, what is?

Above question underlies the rural credit bill just passed—to the credit of this administration. Hitherto the farmer, feeding the nation, owning the land, which means owning the United States, has been the victim of polite usury.

He has had to go to his country banker almost on his hands and knees. And if he paid as little as 8 per cent for his money, and no more than 10 per cent, he was lucky.

An effort has been made at least to improve that condition. A farmer under our banking laws will now be considered worthy of credit—no longer a financial pariah. It is an excellent thing for the farmer and a better thing for the whole country.

Whatever makes farming more secure, more profitable, more desirable as a business, will make farm products more plentiful, and in the end give the nation better and cheaper food.

CASH WAS SCARCE

A wealthy Merced county farmer who had been consulting a Fresno lawyer about some knotty irrigation point received satisfactory advice and then arose to leave the office.

"By the way," he asked, "what is your fee?"

"Eight dollars," replied the young attorney.

The farmer handed him over a ten-dollar gold piece and waited for the change.

The lawyer felt in pocket after pocket. Then he searched his desk with a pale face. Finally he ran through his pockets again, and then drew down from a shelf a huge volume which he had already consulted.

"Er— Well, I'm afraid I'll have to give you a little more advice, sir!" he said politely.

A new gopher gun has been invented by a Portland man, the gun having an efficiency of forcing fumes into gopher holes a distance of 100 feet, getting all the gophers every time. The explosive feature, so dangerous in former inventions, is eliminated.

ARTIFICIAL BUTTERMILK

Dairymen, doctors, and domestic scientists have agreed in recommending buttermilk as a refreshing and nutritious drink, and a great help in cooking, particularly in bread making. It has become so popular that in many localities the demand cannot be supplied in the regular way with buttermilk secured as a by-product from buttermaking.

Artificial buttermilk is made to meet this increased demand by keeping ordinary skim-milk at a temperature of 58 to 70 degrees Fahrenheit for more than 18 to 24 hours, or until it has formed a smooth curd. As soon as the milk thickens it should be churned thoroughly for 20 or 30 minutes, or until the curd is broken up very fine.

Very thin milk does not make buttermilk of the best flavor and consistency, so one pound of whole milk should be added to every eight or ten pounds of separator skim-milk to improve the flavor and smoothness. Hand skimmed milk usually has enough butter fat left in it so that it will make buttermilk of good quality, if we can trust the experience of the Missouri College of Agriculture and many dairymen on this point.

DISCOVERED

One evening in San Francisco, when a water inspector was going round, he stopped at one of the mains in a busy street to turn off the water during some repairs. He had just applied the handle to the tap and begun turning when a somewhat unsteady hand was placed on his shoulder, and he was confronted by a man in evening clothes, who, judging by his tone and manner, had been imbibing much too freely. "Ha, ha," he cried, with a gleam of satisfaction in his eye. "So I've found you at last, have I? It's you that's turning the street around, is it?"

ALFALFA

The name "alfalfa" is of Arabic origin and means the best forage. For long the plant bore such nicknames as "Spanish trefoil" and "Chilian clover"; it is now known botanically as "Medicago Sativa."

The European name of "lucerne," which comes from a certain river valley in northern Italy, was formerly applied to the plant in America, when it was grown in limited areas in many of the eastern States, but that name has gradually given way to that of alfalfa, under which it was introduced by the Spaniards into Mexico more than three centuries ago.

SUNFLOWER SEED

Several years ago I raised a small patch of sunflowers into which a pen of hens were allowed to run, and as the seeds ripened and fell out were quickly picked up by the birds, which at that time had just started to moult. This particular pen moulted in half the time required by those not having the seed and new feathers came in quickly and were more glossy and of better texture than the others; these were stronger and commenced to shell out eggs long before, and in greater numbers than those fed in the ordinary way. A narrative of my various experiments, while it might be interesting, I do not think has a place here, so I will simply state the results.

Sunflower seed, giving a full feed four times a week, at the same time using other grains sparingly during moulting time, will bring the birds through in half the usual time, with better plumage and in better health than by feeding linseed meal, cottonseed meal or any other preparation I have ever seen or used, and it is nature's provision—nothing artificial about it. I do not believe in feeding much dope of any kind. Used as an egg food, care must be taken as the seed is fattening and if fed heavily will throw the fowls into a second moult, which, of course, would be serious. For this purpose I get satisfactory results by giving one full feed of the seed twice a week during the winter time. What I mean by "a full feed" is a handful for each bird.

AN ODD MAPLE TREE

One of the most interesting of natural wonders reported recently is to be found in California, near the town of Scotia. It is a maple tree growing out of the huge stump of an ancient redwood. The maple has attained the average size of its species. The redwood stump is eighteen feet in diameter, and its age is estimated to be fully 4,000 years. The maple is in a flourishing condition.

HOME A PLACE OF REFUGE

Homes are made up of father, with mother and children; and where the binding tie is love, harmony and progress, it is the ideal place of refuge. But the detached members of families have the home instinct the same as their fortunate brethren and sisters. It is always well for two, or three, or more, congenial people to set up for themselves their household goods, until the right opportunity comes for marriage.
